STRIKE SITUATION ENDS CAMPAIGN IN STATE AS SOLONS RUSH TO CAPITAL

LA FOLLETTE AND SUPPORTERS BRING FIGHT TO FINISH

Stumping Tours End Abruptly and the Senators Make for Washington

Must Watch New Laws

Progressives Needed in Epoch-making Legislative Program Now Suggested

So far as his personal participation is concerned, the campaign for renomination waged by Senator R. M. La Follette is ended and the senator is flying toward Washington, accompanied by Senators Clapp of Minnesota, Kenyon of Iowa, Borah of Idaho, and Gronna of North Dakota.

Senator La Follette suddenly terminated the great canvass last night. Word came from Washington that vital importance attached to measures which the president desired to aid in handling the strike situation. La Follette was at Fond du Lac. A telegram notified him the senate had adopted a resolution requesting the presence of every senator who could come. He wired back that he would hurry back to Madison last night and come directly to Washington.

Gets Gronna Here

Charles R. Crownhart, manager of Senator La Follette's campaign, was instructed to get into touch with the other progressive senators and acquaint them with the situation. He reached Senator Gronna at La Crosse Tuesday night and the latter left immediately to join La Follette in Madison. Kenyon and Borah were located in southern Wisconsin and took the first train. Senator Clapp was speaking at Platteville. He, too, hurriedly started for Madison. The group met there Wednesday and are on their way to Washington.

SCORE OF CREW OF CRUISER DEAD AT SAN DOMINGO

Swell Reported Drowning Twenty in Boat; Blast Kills One

Boat Driven on Rocks

Gunboat Castine at Sea With Steering Gear Out of Commission

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—More than twenty men are dead, ten seriously injured and sixty-seven slightly injured, of the crew of the cruiser Memphis, driven on the rocks in Santo Domingo harbor late Tuesday. Admiral Pond reported to the navy department Wednesday forenoon.

The Memphis was hit by a terrific swell as she lay at anchor in the harbor. Pond reported. Effort was made to get up steam. So great was the swell—a great amount of water was believed to have been shipped—that the main steam line of the Memphis broke. One man was killed and the injuries to all of the seventy-seven men were believed to have been caused by the explosion.

Pond reiterated his former statement that more than twenty men returning from shore in a motorboat were drowned.

Two officers were included in the list of injured, Pond said.

The Gunboat Castine, which narrowly escaped the fate of the Memphis, is at sea with all her boats, but one, lost, her steering gear disabled, Pond reported. The ship, however, is under control.

The Tug Potomac, which left San Domingo City for Port Palenque at 1:30 p. m. yesterday, is said to be safe, but there is no word from her.

ONE WEEK MORE FOR LA CROSSE TO ENJOY FRUIT

Railroad Embargo on Perishable Freight is Announced on Wednesday

Produce May Slump

We'll be Without Luxuries But the Butter and Egg Prices May Go 'Way Down

Shadow of the great railroad strike cloud which looms over the nation brushed over La Crosse Wednesday, and fruit-dealers, grocers and commission men began to figure on how to get stocks of vegetables and produce. The railroads issued notice that from this date perishable freight will not be accepted, except such as can reach its destination by Saturday. And a big red stamp began to appear on railroad documents, on which the ominous disclaimer was to be read:

"Subject to delay by strike." Except that it will mean a limitation on table luxuries, such as lemons, oranges, pineapples and other fruits, the railroad order works no hardship on the appetites of La Crosse. The territory tributary to this city is amply able to supply all its wants in the line of fresh vegetables, butter and eggs, milk, etc.

It even appeared as a possibility that the situation would have a favorable effect on the high cost of living. At the C. N. Hawley commission company offices here, it was predicted that the city would receive an over-supply of such produce, which could not be shipped out because of the railroad situation to the larger markets. In this event, it was predicted that the local market would slump, and that prices would perhaps set a low level not reached in years.

The fruit situation, however, is bad, according to John C. Burns, of the fruit house of that name. Mr. Burns, basing his prediction on the memory of the A. R. U. strike in 1894, said that the town would be "cleaned out" so far as fresh fruits is concerned.

Shortage in a Week

Concerning the railroads' refusal to accept perishable freight from this date, Mr. Burns said that it brought the local scarcity within a week's distance.

"We haven't been ordering much; such a move has been expected lately," he said, indicating that such has been expected. "The present stock of fresh fruits and vegetables will last the city about one week."

Mr. Burns said that ninety per cent of the fruit supply of La Crosse is shipped in on trains. The local district can supply only a small fraction of the demand, he said.

No arrangements have been made, so far as could be ascertained today.

SECRETARY OF WAR PAYS TRIBUTE TO PATRIOTISM OF LA CROSSE YOUNGSTERS

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, in a letter to The TRIBUNE, has acknowledged receipt of the souvenir bearing the name of the La Crosse children who contributed their dimes to buy a flag for the Third regiment. A copy of the souvenir was sent to the commanding officers of the Third regiment and the La Crosse militia companies, to Adjutant General Orlando B. Holway, to the president and to Secretary Baker.

Secretary Baker's letter follows:

"War Department, Washington.
"August 23, 1916.

"My Dear Mr. Brayton:
"I have just received the souvenir of Young America, with the printed address recounting the story of the response of the Young American Volunteers who sent Old Glory to Camp Wilson.

"My whole contact with the army has been a constant lesson in Americanism. Not only do our officers and soldiers do their duty in a brave, self-sacrificing and efficient way, but they are truly patriotic and filled with love of the country they serve, and the people of the country, old and young, have shown a supporting patriotic spirit which teaches another lesson of the strength which the American ideal has in the hearts of the people when put to the test.

"I should be very glad to have the Young American Volunteers know how deeply I appreciate the service they have rendered and how much I value the souvenir of that service, with which you have honored me.

"Very truly yours,

"NEWTON D. BAKER,
"Secretary of War."

EXTRA! INFANTILE PARALYSIS MAKES ITS APPEARANCE WITH TWO CASES HERE

VON HINDENBURG CHIEF OF STAFF FALKENHAYN OUT

Report Mackensen Will Succeed von Hindenburg as Chief in East

May Recall Von Kluck

Radical Changes Made in German Military and Diplomatic Leadership

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Radical changes in German military and diplomatic leadership were made by the kaiser following Rumania's appearance in the war drama as a new enemy.

Dispatches from Berlin Wednesday confirmed the dismissal of General Falkenhayn as chief of the German general staff, and reported Field Marshal Mackensen in all probability will succeed von Hindenburg in supreme command of the Austro-German armies on the Russian and Rumanian fronts. Von Hindenburg has been appointed chief of the general staff, succeeding Falkenhayn.

Kaiser Wilhelm dismissed Falkenhayn because Falkenhayn was opposed to sending troops to the eastern front to meet a Rumanian invasion. The Hague correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph reported Wednesday.

Despite his advanced age, General von Kluck may be recalled to active service and given command of one of the Austro-German armies that will attempt to stem the Russo-Rumanian invasion of Hungary.

There is no confirmation of a report from The Hague that both Foreign Secretary von Jagow and Under Secretary Zimmerman tendered their resignations after Rumania declared war. It has been learned from Berlin, however, that neither participated in the conference between Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and certain of his ministers that followed by a few hours the news of Rumania's action.

From Dutch sources it was reported that the kaiser already had ordered the dismissal of German diplomats responsible for failing to keep Rumania out of the war.

TWO BABIES ARE ISOLATED; BOARD CALLS A MEETING

Health Authorities Meet This Afternoon to Outline City's Defense

Infantile paralysis, the dreaded scourge of childhood, against which the city has been waging defensive warfare since the outbreak of the fatal epidemic in Winona and elsewhere in the vicinity, has made its appearance in La Crosse. Two cases of the plague are under isolation.

Neither of the two babies stricken by the disease is in danger of its life. But in each the symptoms are so marked as to leave no question of the diagnosis.

The babies afflicted are the three year old child of Mr. and Mrs. John Juon, 2401 Fremont street, and the two year old infant of Omer B. Johnson, 1631 Winnebago street.

A special meeting of the board of health is being held this afternoon, which was called by the health authorities as soon as it became evident that the city faces the need to devise protective measures against the disease.

The two babies are under isolation, and if their condition permits, will be removed to hospitals at once. According to City Health Commissioner J. M. Furstman, the two are not now ill, having recovered from mild fevers and stomach derangements which were the earlier signs of the disease. Each attack, however, has left paralysis behind. The cases were not definitely diagnosed as the dread plague until the paralysis set in, Dr. Furstman indicated.

PROGRESS WEST OF VARDAR RIVER IS FRENCH CLAIM

PARIS, Aug. 30.—French troops have progressed west of the Vardar river in the fighting in the Balkans, it was officially announced Wednesday, while French artillery conducted an energetic bombardment of enemy organizations on Struma front and around Lake Doiran.

West of Ostrovo lake, the Serbs repulsed a Bulgarian attack, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

Artillery duels are continuing on the Balkan front in the region of Vetrnick and Ostrovo.

Along the western front the usual cannonading occurred Tuesday night. There were no infantry attacks except east of Fleury, on the northeastern front of Verdun, where the French made progress.

SUPERVISORS MEET

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 30.—Sixty-seven of the seventy-two counties of the state have representatives in attendance at the ten day conference of supervising teachers which opened here yesterday afternoon. The complete attendance is over 150. One of the features of today's session was a talk by J. B. Borden, assistant state superintendent on school finance. W. E. Larson spoke on the methods of teaching history and Miss Anne Reynolds on interesting ways of teaching reading.

WILSON TIRELESS IN FIGHT TO GET ORDER RECALLED

Men Have Everything to Lose and Nought to Gain is Impression

Nation May Protest

Believe Country May Urge Delay of Strike Action Pending the Legislation

BY ROBERT J. BENDER

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—President Wilson Wednesday was exerting every effort to secure from the railroad brotherhood leaders a withdrawal of their strike order, effective September 4.

Believing that congress is certain to pass legislation such as the brotherhoods are demanding, administration officials have pointed out the trainmen would have nothing to gain

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—"God forgive you; I cannot." President Wilson, it became known Wednesday, thus concluded his final interview with the railroad executives at the White house Tuesday, when they submitted their final proposition rejecting every effort and suggestion the president had made for peaceful settlement of their dispute with the employees.

by striking and everything to lose. The fact, they say, if the men carry out their strike orders while congress is actually debating on measures favorable to labor, there would be a tremendous reaction in the country against the union men that might turn the entire trend of events.

Thurs. however, the brotherhoods have indicated no intention of rescinding their strike order. It is the hope and belief of administration officials, that following the president's action of Tuesday, there will be an immediate response from the country urging delay of any strike action by the employees until congress has had time to pass the legislation before it.

The railroad strike tying up every piece of rolling stock in the country, will be in effect Monday, brotherhood men declare. The order for it includes every brotherhood man in the United States—both in passenger and in freight traffic.

While the freight men are the only ones making demands, the passenger men are included in the strike order.

The reason that they also did not make demands is that the eight hour day now applies to passenger service, while the pay is based on mileage, or on the slow trains, on a monthly guarantee.

The unions have decided formally that President Wilson's legislative program will not alter their determination to strike; prominent brotherhood men reiterated Wednesday that only railroad acceptance of the eight hour day, ten hour pay, could head off the tie-up.

Asked today if he had been directly requested to postpone the strike, A. B. Garretson, head of the trainmen, replied "We have not" and gave the same answer to a question as to whether he had postponed the strike.

LAST CLOSE WEDNESDAY

Stores along the "main drag" were closed Wednesday afternoon for the last time this year, this being the last Wednesday in August. The Wednesday afternoon closing has been in vogue since June.

BURLINGTON IS ONE OF FIRST TO PUT LIMIT OF TIME FOR DELIVERY

QUARREL MARKS FIRST ATTEMPT TO STAY STRIKE

Statement Brings Robinson Charge Situation is Used For Selfish Ends

La Follette Insurgent

Badger, With Kenyon and Cummins, to Fight the Proposed Rate Raise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The first formal effort of congress to rush through legislation to prevent the strike of four hundred thousand railroad employees set for Monday morning, ended temporarily in a quarrel Wednesday, when bitter charges were made that certain senators are "attempting to make political capital out of a disastrous situation."

The charges were made by Senator Robinson, Arkansas. They followed a statement in committee by Senator Cummins and other republicans. These senators, it was stated, declared that since the date had been set and that a strike appears to be inevitable, there is no need to rush through hasty legislation that might afterwards prove inadequate to hold for all time as law.

"The strike is not inevitable," Robinson was quoted as saying. "It seems to me that a time like this when the nation is facing the most disastrous industrial situation in our history, members of all parties should stand together regardless of party or personal ambitions."

The meeting grew so stormy that the committee adjourned the session after passing a resolution agreeing to hear the employees, the railroad managers, and the shippers in the senate office building Thursday. Just before adjournment, however, the committee decided tentatively to meet again this afternoon.

Two Resolutions

The first legislative step on the floor of either house was taken early this afternoon when Senator Lewis, Illinois, introduced two resolutions. The first was an amendment to the interstate commerce act, providing for two additional members of the commission and division of the proposed nine members into three sections of three members each. Each section, under the amendment, would be assigned to certain districts, thereby necessitating repeal of the original act which provides that the commission shall sit only in the District of Columbia. Arrangement is made for joint action by all three sections "when necessity demands."

The second resolution provides that railroads "whenever necessity exists for increasing wages or readjusting hours of labor, can apply to the commission for rate increases to meet such losses."

Say Strike Must Be Averted

There was an air of optimism present as the senate interstate commerce committee met to weave President Wilson's suggestions into legislative form.

Senate democratic and republican members are unanimous on one point: The strike must be prevented.

For this reason it was the tentative plan to rush through the senate a bill containing only those suggestions.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The traveling public and shippers were warned by western railroads Wednesday to prepare for a strike Monday.

Shippers were notified by a dozen roads running out of Chicago that perishable freight that would not arrive at its destination on or before Saturday would not be accepted. The Santa Fe has already issued an order to its agents to refuse shipments of perishables and livestock at once.

Other railroads taking as sweeping action, but setting their time limit ahead to Saturday for freight deliveries, include: Burlington, Northern Pacific, Rock Island, Southern Pacific, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, St. Louis & San Francisco, Louisville & Nashville, Great Northern, Union Pacific and the Mobile & Ohio.

Remaining roads are expected to take similar action within twenty-four hours.

Travelers Warned
The Southern Pacific warned all prospective travelers they might be subjected to "perplexing delays after Sunday night." Other railroads have given the same warning.

A strike of 6,000 freight handlers in Chicago has been called for Wednesday afternoon. More than 800 are out on three roads now. The Burlington plans to fight the strike and has prepared to hire strikebreakers, according to Thomas Pratt, special agent of the road. If a strike is called it will tie up all Chicago freight shipments.

Two hundred freight handlers on the Soo line struck Wednesday, thus bringing the total number of those out here above 1,000. At the same time arrangements were being made to call out 1,600 more on the Nickel Plate, Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago Great Western and Illinois Central.

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

LIKE MOTHER USED TO MAKE

BY FANNY GRAY

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Nathan Leach was a spoiled only son when Lena Clark married him. His mother had slaved for him all his life, and but for the fact that his was a naturally sunny, unselfish nature, his upbringing would have spelled ruination.

On the whole, however, he was a pretty good sort, and Lena, who had married him with her eyes open, had little cause for complaint. Naturally, he had imbibed the idea that it was woman's place to do all she could to please man, especially to cater to his stomach; for "mother" had always striven to gratify his appetite, and many a time, when scarcely able, had slaved over a hot stove to get up a meal that should please him and his father. She was always cooking some special dainty for him and tempting him with appetizing dishes, until folks used to say that Nathan Leach's wife would have a hard time with Nathan always throwing mother's cooking at her.

Now Lena was something of a cook herself, and rather proud of it, though she did yield the palm to her mother-in-law in some things. When they were first married Nathan had complimented her highly; but, after a time, he had become more critical, and unconsciously fell into the habit of comparing his own table with his mother's.

Lena took it good naturedly, always had a ready answer and so friction was avoided. But the habit grew until it became a very pernicious one, and Lena woke up at last to realize that she never served a meal that did not bring forth some comment or criticism.

And she realized, also, that it was but a habit, for on some of the occasions when complaint was loudest her table was best provided. She turned the situation over and over in her mind, wondering how she could meet it. It was unjust to her, and sooner or later, would mean unhappiness for them both. Nathan certainly needed a lesson. How could she bring home to him his unfairness and prove to him that his criticisms were unwarranted?

Finally she hit upon a plan. Nathan's mother was a pretty good sort, after all. And, although she had been weak and had spoiled her son, she recognized the fact and regretted it. Knowing this, Lena decided to go to her for help in her trouble. She laid the case before her, and the older woman entered into her plan most readily. Mother and wife in a conspiracy against son and husband!

ECZEMA ON BABY'S HEAD AND FACE

Started With Little Pimples, Spread All Over Her Face, Head and Neck and Got Real Sore.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little daughter had a bad case of eczema on her head and face when she was five months old. She took it with just a few little red pimples, and it started from that and spread all over her face, head and neck. They got real sore and she would scratch as they would itch her so much. She was terribly cross and fretful. While it lasted, her face was disfigured. She could not sleep or rest until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I started with just a free sample and it relieved her so I purchased more and about two months after, she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alice Wilbarger, R. F. D. 4, Alliance, Ohio, July 26, 1915.

after all. And, although she had been weak and had spoiled her son, she recognized the fact and regretted it. Knowing this, Lena decided to go to her for help in her trouble. She laid the case before her, and the older woman entered into her plan most readily. Mother and wife in a conspiracy against son and husband!

A few days after Lena's conference with Mrs. Leach, Nathan received a letter from his mother, who lived several miles away, stating that she would arrive on the next day to pay them a visit of a week.

Lena expressed her pleasure, and they planned to give her as good a time as they could. It would be the first time she had made them so long a visit since they had set up house-keeping, and would really be quite an event.

The next morning, at breakfast, after a slightly adverse comment on the coffee, Nathan began: "I do hope you'll be real careful, Lena, about the cooking while mother's here. She's a right smart hand at it, is mother, and I shouldn't want her to think I wasn't havin' as good victuals as she used to set before me."

"All right," said Lena. "I'll try to see to it that your mother gets cookin' as near like her own as possible. Don't you worry any."

Mrs. Leach arrived. Many nice things were planned to give her a good time, and it looked as if the visit would be a success. To be sure, Nathan, like every other farmer, was around only at meal times, and the two women had the house to themselves the rest of the time until evening. Dinner the first day passed off very well, but afterward Nathan took occasion to say, when he and Lena were alone, "Say, Lena, if there's one thing mother can cook it's beef-steak, and that we had today wasn't up to the mark—not by a good deal."

"That so?" said Lena quietly. "Well I didn't see anything the matter with it. Your mother ate her share all right, and acted as if she liked it, too."

"Oh, she'd seem to. You know that. But I tell you it was overdone." Lena didn't answer. But similar scenes took place during the whole of his mother's visit. Possibly he criticized a little less openly than he had been doing at the table, but Lena had to listen to complaints and comparisons till it was a wonder how good naturedly she bore it.

Sometimes, in the presence of both, he would refer to the things "mother used to make," half jokingly, or ask Lena to get the recipe for this thing or that. It was really surprising how both women kept their tempers in the face of a situation that would seem to threaten trouble between them. On the last day of Mrs. Leach's stay, Nathan came in at noon to find Lena lying down on the sofa and his mother ready to take up the dinner and serve him. In response to inquiries, Lena made light of her indisposition, and even ventured the statement that she was feeling so much better maybe she would come to the table.

"Your mother got the dinner, Nathan," she said, as Mrs. Leach was taking in the beefsteak and vegetables. "I am sure you'll enjoy it."

"You bet I will," agreed Nathan, drawing up his chair. "Seems just as if I was at home again."

Everything came in for praise. Never was steak so exactly right, potatoes couldn't be more mealy, and as for the hot biscuits and rhubarb pie—well, they were perfect.

Nathan drove his mother home in the cool of the early evening. When he returned, Lena, having recovered remarkably well from her illness of the morning, sat on the piazza, waiting for him.

There was something she wanted to say, but, somehow, now the moment had come, she couldn't seem to find the right words. But her mother-in-law had done all the enlightening for her.

Nathan felt his way in the dark to the chair near hers, and both kept silence for a few moments. Then Nathan spoke: "Mother told me all about how you and she have made a fool of me all this week—her doin' all the cookin' and neither of you lettin' on to what it was you. Well, I don't know but I deserved it. Anyhow, she says I did. I guess I was kinder fallin' into bad habits."

This being a good deal from Nathan, Lena met him half way. "I always knew you didn't mean it, Nathan, but it used to hurt, just the same. I'm glad you're not angry at the joke. Let's start all over again." "Sure thing," said Nathan.

A ONE-MAN DUET

An ingenious musician has invented an apparatus by means of which he can play the piano and violin at the same time. The bow of the violin is held by a wire attached to an upright the height of the man's shoulder as he sits at the piano. The upright is supported by a base set upon four wheels which are moved by the left foot. The violin is supported from the piano by a brace with a hole large enough for the player's arm to pass through. This arm enables him to turn the violin so that the proper strings come in contact with the bow operated by his foot. With his right hand he strikes the chords on the piano.

TEACHERS' LOT IMPROVES

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 29.—Rapid advances have been made in the qualifications of teachers and their salaries have been increasing proportionately, according to the statement of Superintendent C. P. Cary in an address today before the convention of state supervising teachers here.

TELLING THE OTHER SIDE

The secretary of the navy complains that he was unfairly treated in a recent article in Collier's. He uses such injurious expressions as "misleading," "unjust," and "unfounded" to describe his opinion of this piece. It ought to be unnecessary to say that Collier's entertains no animosity to Mr. Daniels personally. If we have done him an injustice, we will most cheerfully make amends. But we must first know where and how we have wronged him. He bases his impolite characterization of the article on two paragraphs. The first dealt with the testimony of Captain Sims, in which the captain told of the suppression of target-practice figures by "a secretary of the navy."

Mr. Daniels says: "The clear inference is that Josephus Daniels is the secretary who talked to Captain Sims." But Collier's drew or suggested no such inference. It distinctly stated that the captain criticized faults "which have characterized the policy of every weak secretary of the navy, but have reached a climax under Josephus Daniels." The truth is that the secretary referred to was one of Mr. Daniels's republican predecessors. But how does this all answer the general indictment against the present naval administration? The bad scores of the navy are still suppressed. If it was reprehensible for a republican secretary in 1907 to suppress them, is it less reprehensible for a democratic secretary in 1916 to do the same thing? If Mr. Daniels is so solicitous about his reputation for frankness, will he tell us when, where, and how the public has been kept informed as to practice scores during his term of office?—Collier's Weekly.

Secretary Daniels may properly have been taken to task for suppressing facts about the navy, but we are not entirely sure he is more culpable than the press of the country, including Collier's. The latter has given ample space to everything tending to point the cause of preparedness, but facts about the army and navy calculated to sustain the idea that no great expenditure is necessary have been religiously avoided.

For instance, the highest authority in regard to our coast defenses is General Erasmus Weaver, of the general staff, Board of Ordnance and Fortifications and Joint Army and Navy board. Recently before the house committee on military affairs General Weaver testified:

"We have the best coast defenses in the world. The guns now mounted and those contemplated will give us an entirely satisfactory defense."

Enlarging upon that statement the following is taken from the record of the inquiry:

Mr. McKellar. If we conclude to carry out your recommendations and give you the 11,000 men, then, as I understand you, you would have a perfect system of coast defense that you think would be adequate for any purpose?

Gen. Weaver. Yes.
Mr. McKellar. Your idea is that your guns are sufficient now?

Gen. Weaver. The guns now mounted and those contemplated will give us an entirely satisfactory defense.

Mr. McKellar. You do not take any stock in this idea that the ships of foreign nations carrying guns of longer range can silence your guns?

Gen. Weaver. No.

Testimony of General Nelson A. Miles upon this subject follows:

During the last 30 years the government has spent approximately $200,000,000 for our coast defenses.

I am prepared to say that our coasts are as well defended as the coasts of any country and with the same class of high-power guns and heavy projectiles. They are better in some respects than the guns that are mounted at the Dardanelles, which have resisted the most powerful ships of war of the British and French navies.

The results at Alexandria, Port Arthur, and at the Dardanelles furnish sufficient evidence that guns on board ships are no match for coast fortifications and submarine guns.

It has been recently forcibly demonstrated that ship attacks on forts are futile. This war has conclusively demonstrated what every military strategist knew before, that it is impossible for sea craft to attack successfully land fortifications.

I will suppose an unsupportable case. Suppose they could put an army on a fleet of 500 ships and move it across the Atlantic without being disturbed by any naval power, and they could land. They certainly would not go into any port. They could not go into our ports any more than they could go through the Dardanelles. Suppose they got that far as to landing at some remote point—if we could not gather enough men in the army and militia and by other means to destroy that army before they could send their ships back and get another load, I would want to move to some other country.

Turning again to the record we find the testimony of Rear Admiral Knight, member of the general board and president of the Naval Board War College. The admiral told the committee it is practically an impossibility to transfer an army 7,000 miles for war purposes. We quote from the record:

Mr. Callaway: I want to get a concise statement. You consider the enormous dangers of transporting a fleet across a great expanse of hostile water—

Admiral Knight: And maintaining it.
Mr. Callaway: And maintaining it.
Admiral Knight: Yes; I think those dangers are almost insuperable.

Mr. Callaway: Almost insuperable?
Admiral Knight: Yes.
Mr. Callaway: And the maintaining of it is necessary to the conduct of war?

Admiral Knight: Yes.
Mr. Callaway: And you say those difficulties are almost insuperable?
Admiral Knight: The difficulties are almost insuperable.

This is a portion of the record of the address made in the senate by Senator Robert M. La Follette. He reduced the contentions of the militarists to an absurdity and exposed the mercenary purposes of corporations and money lenders who are largely responsible for the creation of the wave of militaristic excitement which has swept the nation. No offer was made to answer that speech and nowhere in the public prints did it find a place. It was followed by a masterful silence the monotony of which was not broken by the press of the country.

Were Secretary Daniels to offer these facts to Collier's for publication he might develop still another case of news suppression to fool the public.

LA CROSSE COUNTY SUFFERS UNDER PHILIPP POLICY

According to figures compiled by L. B. Nagler, assistant secretary of state, La Crosse county suffers a net loss of $6,581.11 under the Philipp administration.

Records he has compiled show La Crosse county received $19,079.35 less state highway aid for 1916 than was received by the county under the McGovern administration. La Crosse county asked for $36,512.92 state highway aid for 1916 and received only $12,204.15 or 33.42 per cent of what was asked for. The state tax was reduced because nothing was included in the state tax for highway aid and the aid that was granted this year was taken from the general fund balance created under the McGovern administration. The difference in the state tax reduction and the loss in highway aid received this year for La Crosse county is $6,581.11, which amount represents the net loss La Crosse county sustains as a result of the so-called Philipp economy plan.

At the same time, the amount of the general property tax for La Crosse county was increased $136,673.72 for the taxes paid this year. In all counties but ten general taxes increased. The total increase for the entire state is exactly $1,303,932.29.

More money has been spent under the Philipp administration than was spent during any full fiscal year that McGovern was governor. Philipp has created two $6,000 positions, unheard of under any former administration, and the total amount of commission and board salaries is $40,830 higher than under the former administration.

Little Half Worn Shoes

God bless the little feet that never go astray.
For the little shoes are empty, in my closet laid away;
Sometimes I take one in my hand, forgetting till I see
It is a little half-worn shoe, not large enough for me;
And at once I feel a sense of bitter loss and pain.
As sharp as when two years ago it cut my heart in twain.

Oh, little feet, that wearied not, I wait for them no more,
For I am drifting on the tide, but they have reached the shore,
And while the blinding terrors wet those little shoes so old,
I try to think my darling's feet are treading streets of gold.
And I lay them down again, but always turn to say,
God bless the little feet that now so surely cannot stray.

And while I thus am standing I almost seem to see
The little form beside me just as it used to be;
Dear little face uplifted, with sweet and tender eyes,
Ah, me, I might have known that look was born of Paradise.
I reach my arms out fondly, but they grasp the empty air,
There is nothing of my darling but the shoes he used to wear.

Oh, the bitterness of parting cannot be done away
Till I meet my darling walking where his feet have never strayed,
When I no more am drifted upon the surging tide,
But with him safely landed upon the river's side.
Be patient, heart, while waiting to see the shining way,
For the little feet in the golden street can never go astray.

The Baseball Editor

A certain renowned ball player whose name had been appearing in magazines over certain signed stories pertaining to the game, bumped into his editor a short while ago.

"Say," he said to his literary manager, "who wrote that last chunk of dope I had in your magazine?"
"Bill Blank," replied the editor.
"What's the kick?"
"Oh, no kick at all," replied the athlete. "I was only thinking that in many ways it was the best story I had ever written."—Selected.

HOBART

Hobart lies on the map like the farthest of lost cities, crouching under the southernmost shore of Tasmania which is beyond Australia and all the inaccessible islands of the Southern ocean. So when you come to Hobart it is another proof of the smallness and the sameness of the modern world to find it lying in the shadow of Mount Wellington, a commonplace twentieth century city.

The tourist ranges the streets of Hobart as the old-time bushranger traveled the back country, alert for spoils in the shape of local souvenirs. Excursions cross the bay to the foot of the mountain in order to look at the city from the vantage point of the other side, whence it looks surprisingly like every other modern city, especially the American and Australian ones. Excursions in wagons climb the slopes of the hills and penetrate the forests where the old-time outlaws slew and plundered, and where it is now time to excursionist drinks a dish of tea and exclaims over the wonders of nature.

Returning to the trim town, you may walk down pleasant avenues, sit by the side of shaded drives, survey the neat architecture and the flourishing greenery of Government house, or scan the floral wonders of the botanical gardens. It is agreeable and uninteresting. Where are the outlaws and the bushrangers of yesterday, who made life precarious and lent it a thrill?

They are dead these many years, and the only traces they have left are in the museums. Here you may see the black cap that the judge wore when he sentenced them to death, the gyves that clanked upon their legs and arms at the time the minions of the law succeeded in rounding them up and depositing them in prison, the rope that tightened about their necks when the trap was dropped under their lawless feet. Even the skull of the worst of them is on exhibition, the case of the brain that plotted murder and the teeth that are said to have chewed the owner's fellowmen when meat was scarce, set up for the gaze of the wondering in modern orderly, progressive prosaic Hobart.

OF THE PARSONAGE

"Good-by, sweetheart," he said quietly, great pity in his heart for the girl who in her desire to do right was doing such horrible wrong. "Good-by, sweetheart. Remember, I will be waiting. Whenever you send, I will come."

He stepped outside, and closed the door. Prudence stood motionless, her hands clenched, until she could no longer hear his footsteps. Then she dropped on the floor, and lay there, face downward, until she heard Fairy moving in her room upstairs. Then she went into the kitchen and built the fire for breakfast.

CHAPTER XIV
She Comes to Grief

Fairy was one of those buoyant, warm-blooded girls to whom sleep is indeed the great restorer. She slept soundly, sweetly, dreamlessly. And every morning she ran down stairs so full of animation and life that she seemed all a tingle to her finger-tips. Now she stood in the kitchen door, tall, cheeks glowing, eyes sparkling, and smiled at her sister's solemn look.

"You are the little mouse, Prue," she said, in her full rich voice. "I didn't hear you come to bed last night, and I didn't hear you getting out this morning. I am an abominably solid sleeper, am I not? Shall I get the maple syrup for the pancakes? I wonder if Jerry knows we only use maple syrup when he is here. I'm constantly expecting Connie to give it away. Why am I always so ravenously hungry in the morning? Goodness knows I eat enough—Why, what is the matter?" For Prudence had turned her face toward her sister, and it was so white and so unnatural that Fairy was shocked.

"Prudence! You are sick! Go to bed and let me get breakfast. Why didn't you call me? I'm real angry at you, Prudence Starr! Here, get out of this, and I will—"
"There's nothing the matter with me. I had a headache, and did not sleep, but I am all right now. Yes, bring the syrup, Fairy. Are the girls up yet?"
Fairy eyed her suspiciously. "Jerry is out unusually early, too, isn't he? His door is open. I didn't hear him coming down so he must have quite outdone himself today. He generally has to be called twice."

"Jerry has gone, Fairy." Prudence's back was presented to view once more, and Prudence was stirring the oatmeal with vicious energy. "He left early this morning—I suppose he is half-way to Des Moines by now."
"Oh! Fairy's voice was non-committal.
"Will you get the syrup now?"
"Yes, of course—When is he coming back?"
"He isn't coming back. Please hurry, Fairy, and then call the others. The oatmeal is ready."

Fairy went soberly down cellar, and brought up the golden syrup. Then, ostensibly to call her sisters, she hurried up the stairs.
"Girls," she began, carefully closing the door of her room behind her. "Jerry has gone, and isn't coming back any more. And for goodness' sake, don't keep asking questions about it. Just eat your breakfast as usual, and have a little tact."
"Gone!"
"Yes."
"A lovers' quarrel," suggested Lark, and her eyes glittered greedily.
"Nothing of the sort. And don't keep staring at Prue, either. And do not keep talking about Jerry all the time. You mind me, or I will tell papa."

"That's funny," said Carol thoughtfully. "We left them kissing each other like mad in the back yard last night—and this morning he has gone to return no more. They are crazy."

"Kissing! In the back yard! What are you talking about?"
Carol explained, and Fairy looked still more thoughtful and perturbed. She opened the door, and called out to them in a loud and breezy voice. "Hurry, girls, for breakfast is ready, and there's no time to waste in a parsonage on Sunday morning." Then she added in a whisper, "And don't you mention Jerry, and don't ask Prudence what makes her so pale, or you'll catch it!"

Then she went to her father's door. "Breakfast is ready, papa," she called clearly. She turned the knob softly, and peeped in. "May I come in a minute?" Standing close beside him, she told him all she knew of what had happened.

"Prudence is ghastly, father, just

A Great Discovery.

Swollen hands, ankles, feet are due to a tropical condition often caused by disordered kidneys. Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.
As a remedy for those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation caused by uric acid—swelling, urine, backache and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gout, it is simply wonderful how quickly "Anuric" acts; the pains and stiffness rapidly disappear.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND
OF DAISY DEAN

Kathlyn Williams, the well-known film star whose last big picture was "The Ne'er-Do-Well," has resigned from Selig and signed for a long-time contract with Morosco-Pallas on the Paramount program.
Miss Williams' success in pictures has not been on the "overnight" variety. She entered filmdom seven years ago in company with Mary Whitall and other members of the "old guard" at the Biograph under D. W. Griffith.
In addition to acting she is also a member of the authors' league. Among her offerings in this field are "Thy Will Be Done," "The Last Dance," "Strange Case of Talmat Lind," "Pride of Baldoun" and many others, all produced. She is to start her initial production for Paramount next month.

SHE'S GOOD AT LIMERICKS

Margaret Shelby, since her arrival from New York in Los Angeles several weeks ago, has had the enjoyment of but twenty-four hours with her sister, Mary Miles Minter, at Santa Barbara. Miss Shelby was immediately spoken for by Oliver Morosco for the Grace Livingstone Funniss play, "The Fibber," at the Burbank theater, so has been kept busy in Los Angeles and this play ever since. Mrs. Florence Shelby, mother of Mary and Margaret, divides her time between Santa Barbara and Mary and Los Angeles and Margaret. The latter has a little apartment not far from the Burbank theater and her pastimes are writing limericks and devoting herself and tiny kitchen to teas and candy-making.

"The Devil's Needle," the latest triangle picture starring Tully Marshall and Norma Talmadge, has been rejected by the Ohio board of censors. Tully Marshall played a dope fiend in "The City" on the stage, but they apparently won't let him do it in the movies. "The Devil's Needle" deals with a dope addict. When it was exhibited in New York recently the critics reported it harmless and completely satisfying.

aidine Farrar picture. He has several successful roles in recent Fox pictures to his credit, among them being a heavy lead in "The Honor System," by Henry Christeen Warnack. He also appears as support to Fannie Ward in "Each Pearl a Tear."

Adelaide Woods has completed her re-engagement by the Morosco company and by way of recreation is moving her household goods from one shrine to another, meaning merely an exchange of bungalows.

Vacation for Mother Without Going Away

The housewife who knows how to enjoy a real vacation right at home. She can get away from the hot kitchen and the mess and exertion of baking and yet serve tasty meals that will delight the whole family.

She can do this by selecting foods that are quickly and easily prepared. Holland Rusk the dainty Dutch delicacy, is such a food. It saves the work and heat of home baking and can be served in a great variety of tempting ways. For instance what could be more appetizing as a summer dessert than this:

Raspberry Rusk
Take a box of fresh raspberries or reheat a jar of canned raspberries or any canned berry. If there is not enough juice add a little more water and sugar to the jar of berries. When hot use in the following manner. Butter a Holland Rusk, put some fruit on this and plenty of juice so the Rusk absorbs the liquid. On top place another Rusk, the bottom of which has been buttered. On top, which is not buttered, put berries and juice again allowing plenty of juice. Continue until you have three Rusks on top of each other, all absorbed with juice and a layer of fruit between them. Place a saucer on this and weight it down. Set in a cold place. Just before serving cut in slices. Serve with whipped cream.
This is only one of many good things you can make quickly and easily with Holland Rusk. Most grocers sell Holland Rusk, also Windmill Cookies, another Dutch dainty.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—“When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the tumor and the change of life and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it.”

FAMILIES REUNITED

DECORAH, Ia., Aug. 30.—(Special.)—Last week there gathered ninety descendants of the Henderson-Kerr-Durno families, who reside at Postville, a short distance from here, the farmhome of Charles Kerr was the scene of the reunion and on the day following, all the old settlers of the vicinity were invited to join with the three principal families for an Old Settlers' picnic. Six states were represented in the family reunion; nearly half way across the continent to attend. Dubuque, Charles City, Cherokee and Newton sent the largest number. The families are of Scotch descent, Col. Henderson being the most influential but all holding honored positions wherever located.

Me—Short for Medicoe

An artist should consider facts about the masters of his profession calmly and thoughtfully. He may reach valuable conclusions about himself. A certain musical composer of much talent—we will call him Smithkins—has a hearty appreciation of his own work as his friends all know. So highly does he appreciate the composition of Smithkins that one of his friends was much startled the other day when he said gravely: “Did you ever notice that the names of all great composers begin with ‘M’?”

“M!” ejaculated the astonished hearer.

“Yes,” “M,” said the composer. “Mozart, Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer, Moszkowski and Me!”

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses “Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound” now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ON RIGHT SIDE OF THE STREET WHEN ACCIDENT OCCURED

That her car was in proper position, on the right side of the street and so close to the curb that an occupant stepped from the vehicle to the sidewalk, that she was proceeding at low speed and that the vehicle that came into collision with her made a too-short turn in front of her, is the explanation of the accident in which Christ Gilberg was injured, given by Mrs. F. A. Morley. To this Mrs. Morley has two witnesses.

The story published yesterday was procured from Mr. Gilberg's daughter, who was not a witness. The Morley car was uninjured excepting for the breaking of a lens which came in contact with the hind wheel of the wagon. While considerably bruised and scratched, Gilberg's injuries are not serious.

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Says glass of hot water before breakfast washes poisons from system.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

Four Sparta businessmen were present at the conference—Lee Canfield, Hal J. Davis, L. T. Hill and H. W. Jefferson, and the visiting officials were given to understanding just what the prevailing sentiment is in the city regarding the depot the company is putting up. Whether any good will come of the meeting remains to be seen.

Worthy of Comment
 Some years ago an expedition from the University of Pennsylvania was sent to one of the southern states for the purpose of observing a solar eclipse.

The day before the event one of the professors said to an old dorky belonging to the household wherein the scientist was quartered:

"Tom, if you watch your chickens tomorrow morning you'll find that they'll all go to roost at 11 o'clock."

Tom was of course, skeptical; but at the appointed hour the heavens were darkened and the chickens retired to roost. At this the man's amazement showed no bounds and he sought out the scientist.

"Professor," said he, "how long ago did you know dem chickens would go to roost?"

"About a year ago," said the professor, smilingly.

"Well, ef dat don't beat all!" was the man's comment. "Perfessor, a year ago dem chickens wa'n't even hatched."

Stored Up Energy

Everybody needs it—stored for emergency in a well-developed, well-preserved, well-nourished body and brain.

Grape-Nuts food stands preeminent as a builder of this kind of energy. It is made of the entire nutriment of whole wheat and barley, two of the richest sources of food strength.

Grape-Nuts also includes the vital mineral elements of the grain, so much emphasized in these days of investigation of real food values.

Crisp, ready to eat, easy to digest, wonderfully nourishing and delicious.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

Little Edna, who was watching the men working a pile-driver in the lot opposite, said to her mother, "I'm so sorry for those poor men, mamma; they've been trying and trying to lift out that great weight, and every time they get it almost to the top it falls right back again."—Boston Transcript.

Hindrances to Usefulness.

The great hindrances to usefulness in those who think they wish to be useful, yet have never really tried to be, are pusillanimousness and ambition. They are twin sisters. To put it otherwise, there is the fault of not thinking it worth while to do a little because it is little, and of not caring to do something because it may not lead to much.—Bishop Thorold.

Rumanian detachments, advancing from Predeal, crossed the frontier
and attacked an Austrian frontier guard. Part of the Austrian force was captured and the Rumanians
then withdrew to the border where the entrenched and repulsed counter attacks.

On the extreme wings, the Rumanians are pressing forward into Hungary with a pincer-like movement
that threatens to squeeze the Teutons
out of all southeastern Transylvania.
Unofficial reports from Bucharest
today said that Rumanian vanguards which formed a junction with the Russians in the north have pushed forward more than a mile into Transylvanian territory.

ant damage was done.

Bombard Bulgar City
AMSTERDAM, Aug. 30.—Rumanian
artillery is bombarding the Bulgarian city of Rusechuk, and the Hungarian town of Orsovo, according to Vienna advices Wednesday afternoon.

Rusechuk lies on the River Danube, opposite the Rumanian city of Giurgiu and on railways affording an easy entrance into Bulgaria for Rumanian invading armies. If the Amsterdam report is true the bombardment marks the beginning of hostilities against Bulgaria by Rumania.

Orsovo lies near the junction of the Rumanian, Serbian and Hungarian frontiers.

Sidelights On Rail Discussion In The Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Senator
Cummins on Wednesday in a senate
speech denounced "so-called compulsory arbitration" as an impossibility. There is no power, he said, in which federal or state governments
can force men to work when they do not want to. This, he said, would be the case under any actual compulsory arbitration law. The fifth and thirteenth amendments to the constitution, he said, would prevent operation of such proposed laws.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Unless the interstate commerce commission
is enlarged in number and invested with wide regulative powers, government ownership of railroads is inevitable, Senator Hardwick, Georgia, declared in the senate Wednesday.

REWARDS POSTED FOR TWO BODIES LOST IN RIVER

$50 Offered for Body of Miss Wilson Who Leaped From Deck
of Quincy

Rewards were posted Wednesday morning for the recovery of two bodies lost in the river in the last two weeks. Fifty dollars is offered by her brother for the body of Miss Minnie J. Wilson, who leaped to her death from the deck of the packet Quincy Tuesday morning, and $25 for the recovery of the body of Jack Martin, former famous light opera singer, who drowned as a laborer from a government rock barge near Brownsville.

Posting of the rewards started several rivermen out today to look for the bodies. They are searching along wing dams and snags where the bodies may have been lodged by the current.

Andrew Wilson, brother of the woman who jumped from the Quincy, arrived in the city late Tuesday evening to direct the search for his sister's body.

WHEAT IS DOWN 4 3-8 AT CLOSE

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—September wheat closed on Wednesday 2 7-8
below the opening, a loss of 4 3-8
cents over Tuesday night's close.
December wheat was down 4 1-2 cents
from Tuesday's close, while May was down 4 3-4 cents. A heavy selling movement took place just before the market closed, due to fears of the traders that a railroad strike could not be averted.

$160,000,000 SUIT AGAINST MORGAN ESTATE

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Suit for $160,000,000, the largest sum ever
asked in a federal court action here,
was begun here Wednesday by five Massachusetts stockholders of the New Haven railroad against the estate of J. P. Morgan and more than a dozen directors of the road.

The five plaintiffs hold $1,250,000
of New Haven stock. They allege that $160,000,000 was lost to the treasury of the road through the efforts of J. P. Morgan and the directors to create a transportation monopoly in New England.

Edwin Adams, Julius C. Morse,
George C. Fiske, James F. Ray and Mary M. Clark were the plaintiffs.

I. C. C. SUSPENDS INCREASED RATES ACROSS CONTINENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The interstate commerce commission on Wednesday suspended increased transcontinental rates, recently proposed by coast to coast carriers.

The proposed schedules are suspended to December 30, because "the rights and privileges of the public
appear to be injuriously affected,"
by the increases.

During the period of suspension
the commission will conduct a thorough investigation of the proposed rates.

tions of the president which will achieve this without being subject to attack and ruinous delay through debate. This effort being successful,
it was urged, the other suggestions
could later be considered as amendments with ample time for debate.

Inquiry among senators, including progressives, republicans and democrats who might object to certain suggestions as being too favorable to the railroads, showed the following as being most likely to be acceptable:

The eight hour proposition; authorization of a commission to study
and report to congress on the effect
of the eight hour law's operation;
provision for mediation, conciliation
and arbitration with a clause compelling full public investigation of every phase of the dispute before a strike
or lockout may be lawfully attempted,
and judgment in the hands of the president of the power, in case of military necessity, to take over control of the railroads.

Fight on the other two suggestions
of the president, enlargement of the interstate commerce commission and explicit approval by congress of the consideration by the interstate commerce commission of an increase in freight rates, appeared inevitable.

Senators Kenyon, Cummins and La Follette have bitterly opposed any hint of such suggestions in the past.
All three have fought together on this line. Senator Cummins was the first of the progressive trio to declare his position. He announced yesterday his intention of making "observations regarding legislation in connection with the railroad situation."

The embargo announced by the New Haven, and the possibility that other roads would take similar action,
created the greatest consternation
among shippers. Owing to the heavy traffic and car shortage under normal conditions it is realized that the railroads may not be able to handle any more freight than is now actually on hand.

A feller that can't control his temper, can't control nothing else in this world.

CONDUCTOR GETS TEMPORARY ORDER AGAINST STRIKE

Head of Conductors' Brotherhood Sought
as a Party in the Injunction

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 30.—Edwin
A. Hamilton, a Union Pacific conductor for eighteen years, on Wednesday obtained from District Court Judge W. G. Sears a temporary order restraining officials of the Order of Railway Conductors from issuing a strike order on the Union Pacific lines, circulating any strike order, or spending any money for strike purposes.

Hearing on the petition for permanent injunction was set for September 2. Hamilton named as defendants A. B. Garretson, president of the order, and included as defendants the three divisions of the brotherhood, known as the eastern,
southern and western associations,
but the order only is effective in Nebraska, the limit of Sears' jurisdiction.

Hamilton in his petition said that up to July 1 the railroads were regarded as separate units in the brotherhood, but at that time the rules were amended and it was provided that the vote of all should rule
the conductors on each road. He claims this is illegal, because the strike ballots were sent out June 15
and that, he claims, the conductors of the Union Pacific did not cast a two-thirds vote authorizing the strike.

Hamilton asserts that if the strike
goes on, he will lose his pension rights if he strikes, or if he does not strike he will lose his regular rights in the brotherhood, and so brings the suit not only for himself but all similarly affected.

Court officials are trying to get service on Garretson, who lives in Des Moines, and a long string of other officials widely scattered.

STRIKE WOULD CRIPPLE PRESS

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—A very large number of the daily newspapers of the United States will be forced to suspend publication if a nation-wide railway strike continues for two weeks. Lincoln B. Palmer, manager of the American Newspaper
Publishers' association, declared
Wednesday afternoon.

"Many publishers are on a hand-
to-mouth basis regarding print paper," Palmer said, "getting a car-load
from the mill just as they are exhausting the car load on hand."

Would Close Flour Mills
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 30.—
Flour mills here, manufacturing one-third of the nation's flour supply,
will close down within a week after
a national railway strike is called, it is reliably reported. Suspension would be forced by inability to get wheat. Civic associations today stand ready to hold for local consumption one week's product of flour mills.

canned vegetables in cold storage
here to keep Chicagoans in food for a year in case of a strike. The only danger is an ice and coal shortage.

Coal dealers say the present coal supply would be exhausted within five days. With no coal to generate cold air for refrigerating houses the food supplies stored in these houses would quickly spoil. Artificial ice plants
would be compelled to close.

Stop Order Given

An order to quit work at 6 a. m.
Monday was given Rock Island employes at a meeting Tuesday night.
The order is subject to countermand
from Washington before noon Sunday.

A committee of thirteen was appointed at a meeting of middle western manufacturers Tuesday to meet in Washington Friday morning to call on the president and insist that the brotherhood demands be submitted to arbitration.

Railroad terminals were jammed
today. Business men rushed to other cities to close deals so they could get back before a strike is called. Vacationers were hurrying home.

Efforts were being made today to line up lake steamers to be used for shipping produce between Michigan
points and Chicago.

Eastern Roads Get Busy
NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Eastern railroads are preparing for a long siege in event the general strike of the big four brotherhoods goes into effect Monday, as threatened.

It was learned Wednesday that cities, towns and country districts
have been combed for mechanics, men
who can serve as brakemen, conductors and yardmen, and even stationary
engineers have been enlisted.

The entire force of the New York
Central—numbering upwards of 4-000—may be used in various capacities. Heads of various departments, attorneys, superintendents and various division officers have sent in lists of men who will be available for work.

Many lines have already put an embargo on all freight which cannot be delivered before September 4.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was the first to declare an embargo on freight in the eastern district. The Pennsylvania was second. The New York Central, Lackawanna, Erie and New York, Susquehanna & Western expected to follow suit.

BALKED WITH FIRE GIRL STARTS NEW LINE OF REVENGE

Miss Amanda Huxshall
Hales Swain Who Jilt-
ed Her to Court on Serious Charge

Miss Amanda Huxshall, who appeared in county court Tuesday following an alleged attempt to set fire
to an ice house because it housed
the motorcycle of a former admirer,
on Wednesday developed a new line
of offense against the swain who is said to have jilted her.

He is Elmer Boreson, farm-hand
employed by Will Hartley, a farmer
on the North Salem road. The police arrested him Tuesday night, and in the morning he was arraigned before Judge Brindley on a serious statutory charge. Miss Huxshall is complainant in the case.

Miss Huxshall's competence to make charges against Boreson was established by an insanity commission of physicians who examined her Tuesday afternoon. Because of her attitude upon the ice-house case the examination was ordered, but the physicians reported her to be sane.

Boreson was bound over.

STRIKE QUARTERS FOR NORTHWEST READY IN ST. PAUL

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 30.—Headquarters from which the railway
brotherhoods will direct the railway strike of the northwest were opened here Wednesday. Leaders of the various brotherhoods started pouring into St. Paul to be directed on handling the strike.

"We are ready," they all said.

Minnesota meat packers today ordered killing suspended Thursday,
awaiting the outcome of the strike.
The Albert Lea, Minn., branch of the Wilson company, formerly Sulzberg & Sons, led this movement.

RUSH SUPPLIES TO TROOPS ON BORDER

EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 30.—In anticipation of a nation-wide strike, the quartermaster's department of the army is rushing vast amounts of supplies here to form a reserve for the United States troops and national guardsmen now mobilized in this district.

SHIPPING BILL PASSES HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The house Wednesday afternoon passed the administration shipping bill. It creates a shipping board of five members to develop a naval auxiliary and reserve and a merchant marine. The house agreed to the senate amendments permitting foreign vessels to engage in coastwise trade and authorizing the secretary of the treasury to deny clearance to any vessel which refuses to accept freight destined to a foreign port.

CARRANZA DECREE NATIONALIZES THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—General Carranza in a decree made public Wednesday announced the nationalization of property of the Catholic church in Mexico.

The churches will be nominally controlled by the clergy. The government, however, reserves the right to police them and prevent them from being used for any purpose other than prescribed by law. The government also reserves the right to discontinue their use as a place of worship after one year's service.

TUBERCULOSIS NOT GROUND OF AWARD

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 30.—Tuberculosis carried Andrew Reitzner of Appleton, to the grave last November. His widow asked the industrial commission to award compensation on the ground that he had contracted the disease while employed by the Wisconsin Malt & Grain company. The commission handed down a decision denying compensation because "the workmen's compensation act does not compensate for disability from a disease which comes on gradually."

Worried Parents Start Search For Son in La Crosse

Parents of Aldrich Jackson,
student at the W. B. U. last winter, have begun an investigation here to discover the present whereabouts of their son. He has not written home since June 9, and they are alarmed over his prolonged silence. Through an attorney at Barron, Wis.,
they appealed to Sheriff Ritter Wednesday morning to start a hunt for the young man.

Jackson, according to his parents' information, while here stopped at the Cook hotel. His parents are well-to-do farm folk near Barron.

ROSENSTEIN BUYS TANNING FACTORY FROM THE COURT

Smith-Figved Company
to Continue Operation Under Local
Fur Dealer

By an important deal which became known today, the Smith-Figved Tannery, 301 North Front street, which has been in operation under the supervision of the court since its owners went upon the financial rocks, has become the property of M. Rosenstein, head of the La Crosse Fur and Hide company. The tannery henceforth is to put its product on the market
under Mr. Rosenstein's name.

The deal for the plant was closed
last Saturday. Mr. Rosenstein purchased the stock and fixtures at the price set by the court's appraisers,
and entered into immediate possession.

The Smith-Figved company had been in operation for more than a year with considerable success, until
the tragic death of the senior partner,
since which time it suffered reverses
which ended in the bankruptcy court.
The concern, however, has been running as usual under the management of the court's appointees.

The concern under the new management, as under its former owners, will turn out high grade coats
and other articles of cow and calfskin. It also makes a specialty of custom tanning, and other work in the same line.

SOCIABILITY TOUR AND DINNER TRULY WAS BIG SUCCESS

There never, never was such a dinner before.

All the La Crosse people who attended the "Sociability Tour" of the Chamber of Commerce to Mindoro
Wednesday agreed to it. Chicken-cooked as mother used to cook it when these folk were boys on the farm. Pies that WERE pies and cake that WAS cake! And coffee that made one want to start in
and do it all over again.

The promised one hundred grew to upwards of 130 as the two score
automobiles converged upon Mindoro.
Some went directly by way of West
Salem, but the majority took in Holmen and Stevenston. They arrived, happy and hungry. The good women of the Cemetery association were ready for the appetites that fresh air
had created, and the tourists extended themselves and distended their belts to accommodate proportions. Indeed, it is a wonder that the Cemetery association was not called upon to bury some of their guests of the prolific appetite.

The dinner was served in the town hall, which was crowded. Dr. H. Clay

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—St. Louis tightened the American league race still more on Tuesday by taking two games from the leading Red Sox, 5 to 3 and 8 to 2.

The title did not go to him without a struggle, however, and although he went into the finals a favorite over A. R. Weller of Milwaukee, it looked for a time as though the championship would go to the Town club star.

Finals, Men's Championship, Doubles

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Tuesday's Hero
Home Run Baker. He marched to the plate to deliver one of his mighty swats when two Yankees were on the sacks, and struck out just as gracefully as did Casey.

Nick Cullop was one of the New York stars to taste defeat at the hands of the Tigers.

Slim Sallee had a little more luck than usual. His team-mates made three runs for him against the Reds, and he won.

Hal Chase did a first rate second basing job for the Reds.

Lefty Tyler went into the iron man class Tuesday when he worked in both games of a double header against the Pirates. He won both games, but didn't finish the second.

Watson went down to defeat when the Dodgers got to him at St. Louis for five runs in one inning.

The despised Athletics again took a fall out of a pennant possibility when they hammered out a victory over the White Sox, Pitcher Johnson contributing a home run.

The Phillies hit the ball for seven-

By Midnight Tuesday, August 15th

Up to midnight August 15, a period of 7½ months, we sold and delivered more United States Automobile Tires than we sold during the entire twelve months of 1915—last year.

By August 16, we had passed, by several thousand casings, the sales total for 1915,—itself a year of steady sales increases.

And day by day these phenomenal 1916 increases are heaping up.

Besides—there were still left of this year 115 selling days—4½ months.

This almost unbelievable feat of equalling, in 7½ months, the sales record of last year, proves the unequalled merit and actual economy of

BUCKEYE STATE WILL CELEBRATE ITS PROSPERITY

At Dubuque, Iowa, during the week beginning October 2nd, will be held a Prosperity Celebration and Industrial Exposition that will be to the territory for 100 miles surrounding Dubuque what the big state and world's fairs are to the communities in which they are held. Dubuque and the territory surrounding it has never had a celebration of the magnitude of one it is now going to conduct; but this year the business interests there have united in raising $50,000 to be used in putting on an event that will beat anything else held this year in Iowa or adjacent states.

This territory has been enjoying an era of unparalleled prosperity. Dubuque is arranging this celebration in order to show to the world how this territory is going forward. The industrial, commercial and agricultural exhibits in connection with the celebration will be worth going miles to see.

It will consist of two miles of merchants' and manufacturers' exhibits, an exact reproduction of the New York Hippodrome, in which the largest and best amusement attractions ever seen in the west will be shown. There will be floral, military, Mardi Gras and other parades. One of the famous bands—like Sousa's or Creators—will be in attendance, in addition to ten other bands. The streets and buildings will be illuminated, using over forty thousand incandescent lamps, and will be beautifully decorated with tons of decorations. Some of our most prominent orators and statesmen have already accepted invitations to attend and deliver orations. In fact not a stone has been left unturned to make it the largest, grandest, best and highest-class celebration ever seen in this country.

The Dubuque Commercial club, who is giving the affair, has succeeded in securing the unanimous co-operation and working support of its citizens. It expects to entertain over hundred thousand out-of-town visitors. Dubuque's slogan is "Come to our City and see miles of sights free. The City is yours. Come to Dubuque and enjoy a week of fun, frolic and merriment."

THE HASKIN LETTER

NEW YORK A LA CARTE

By Frederic J. Haskin

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Eating is here classified as a sport. Dinner, which is regarded as a necessity to be satisfied in the least possible time west of the Mississippi and largely as a family affair south of the Potomac, here becomes a public amusement capitalized at millions. Broadway, if you can visualize the number of restaurants along, above and beneath it, is seen as one immense feeding trough where tens of thousands nightly gather from the ends of the earth.

The typical Broadway cabaret, from the little one in the cellar, where a couple of retired chorus girls form the entertainment feature, to the big one on the roof, which has enough song and dance people to equip a musical comedy for the road, is primarily a system for helping the ubiquitous itinerant to part from his change. The man from somewhere else goes there in the expectation of being thrilled and shocked by the night life of the great white way, and sees little besides himself in all his amazing variety.

But move away from Broadway, penetrate inland from that main river of the transients, and you will find that dining is still a ceremony and a sport wherever you go. There are eating places for every taste, pocketbook and nationality, every degree of vice and virtue, eating places that appeal to every fable and weakness.

If, for example, you share the almost universal desire to consort with the wealthy, you can achieve the sensation, if not the fact, by going to one of those pompous Fifth avenue places where "subdued elegance" is the prevailing note. The manner of the headwaiter, the color of the furniture, the music of the orchestra, the speed of the service, everything except the cost, is extremely subdued. You can dine in serene, attenuated and ostentatious boredom, your only amusement being to look at and speculate about the queer exhibits that inhabit the place. There are all sorts and they are hard to classify. You know that the reputation of the establishment is due to the presence of some of them, and that the presence of others is due to the reputation of the establishment. But it is hard to tell who is which.

The next step, in your gastronomical wanderings will probably be a trip into the historical. The modern New Yorker is a crank on the subject of old New York. It is hard to discover just exactly what old New York is, or what period is thereby denoted, but at any rate there are whole libraries on the subject, and societies organized to study it; and like every thing else in New York, it has been capitalized and converted into eating places. How that mythical being, the old New Yorker, may have talked and walked and worked and amused himself is a matter for research and speculation, but his restaurants have been abundantly preserved and restored. You can breakfast just off Fifth avenue in a dilapidated inn, the walls of which are fairly bedizen with relics of the departed great; you can lunch in a tavern where George Washington stopped, and take your afternoon tea in a genuine colonial coffee house, where the local color consists of a number of long mirrors, some very authentic looking old oil paintings in which the figures are shrouded in deep gloom, and a corps of genuine indigenous waitresses, speaking good English and clad in costumes of some period indeterminate but obviously remote. Most of these places, however, are only a little off the beaten track, and you can tell at a glance that a majority of the patrons are in your own class.

Determined still to discover the truly exotic phases of New York, if you have a sound digestion and a truly adventurous spirit, your next assault will probably be upon the foreign table d'hôte. You will climb the time worn steps of an old brownstone front and pass through the hallway and reception room, into what was once the backyard of some respectable citizen, but is now dignified by the name of a summer garden. Here you are certainly in an atmosphere remote from Broadway. The waiters speak no English, and a good many of the patrons chatter and gesticulate in some alien language, putting their immense black bottles of red wine on the ground beside their chairs. But here, too, is the inevitable rubberneck, the man who like yourself, doesn't really belong, and can neither tell what the dishes are nor ask the waiter. Furthermore, that wild bohemianism that you read about is still lacking. The place is as orderly as a Sunday school. The worst shock you receive is when the waiter serves the cheese before the dessert.

And so up and on with the quest, perhaps this time to Washington Square and Greenwich Village, that storied section where genius buds and the carefree intellectuals live their harum scarum lives (see any book on the subject). This is where Tom Paine starved and Poe wrote the "Fall of the House of Usher." Robert Louis Stevenson and Mark Twain used to sit here in the square and discuss all things under the sun with incomparable brilliancy. They would find strange company there now. It swarms with Italians and Jews, and hordes of the offspring of both of those, and a number of other races fill it with a shrill babble.

But a few blocks away is Gonfalone's, which we mention by name because O. Henry did so, remarking that the place was a literary landmark. It has thereby become a literary landmark by reputation at least, and the fact is abundantly set forth in its advertisements. Beyond a doubt, it is calculated to give the wandering provincial a considerable impression of the unusual. The place has a look of time-stained age. The orchestra consists of three Italian women and a songstress who renders classical selections, but gets most of her applause when she answers an encore with "Where the River Shannon Flows."

A good many patrons are obviously foreign and there is quite a sprinkling of long haired, queer looking chaps, but you can tell at a glance that the buyer from Kokomo has penetrated even into this retreat. These Philistines may be easily selected from among the true habitués when the vermicelli is served. There are some present who do the real Italian sword swallowing stunt, as though they had been raised on the stuff. Others, who are experienced but not skillful, carefully and conservatively cut it into little bits. But watch the man from somewhere else, who never before saw the sinuous Italian dainty served full length, but whose self-confidence is equal to any task. With some difficulty he winds it around his fork, lifts it on high and strives to engulf it at a swoop, like a bass after a minnow. But almost invariably, one or perhaps two of the supple strands about eighteen inches long become disengaged, and the rash adventurer's maneuvers for the next thirty seconds draw grave and disapproving consideration from three tables on either hand. Disillusioned but not discouraged, for your next meal you penetrate still farther into the wilderness of Greenwich, up the famous MacDougall alley, locally known as the Rabbit Hole. Almost by accident you discover a weather-worn sign over an ancient basement door, and daintily, with a sense of adventure, you enter. Through a dark and narrow hallway you reach a little three-cornered niche between tall buildings. On one side you see through opened windows into a row of studios. On the other you get a glimpse of the inner workings of a pickle factory. This sequestered spot has been made shady by the spreading of a great striped awning, and is furnished with bare deal tables and kitchen chairs. It looks like a hang-out of thieves. But those who come here are of a most respectable appearance—young ladies armed with immense portfolios, wearing square-toed shoes and last year's hats and expressions of abstract contemplation, and thoughtful young men with bow ties and manuscript cases. Presently there enters a tall, stoop-shouldered chap, who looks about, hangs his hat and stick on a rusty nail in the wall, sinks into a chair and lights a cigarette. He has a lined and careworn countenance; his eyes are concealed by dark glasses and above them towers a brow as shining and conspicuous as a boarding-house door knob. His expression is one of deep meditation—or perchance of boredom. He fairly radiates an atmosphere of lofty cerebration. At last, you feel, you are in the haunts of the truly intellectual.

Toward the end of your meal in comes a short, blonde, happy looking person, who approaches this mental giant and daintily smites him on the back.

"Hello, Bill," he almost shouts. "what in the dickens are you doing in this queer joint?" Bill exhales a cloud of smoke and turns upward a look of green goggled ennui.

"O, just trying to find something amusing in this blame town. By the way, Jake, are you buying misses' skirts long or short for the fall trade?"

Truly, the type and symbol of the New York crowd is the Guy from Somewhere Else!

Truly Remarkable Bird.

A schoolboy, writing a description of hens, said: "Hens is curious animals; they don't have no nose, nor no teeth, nor no ears. They swallows their wittles whole, and chews it up with their crops in their chests. The outside of hens is generally put into pillows or made into feather dusters."

LIVESTOCK AND PRODUCE PRICES

GO BALLOONING

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.-Produce and livestock prices in the local markets soared Wednesday as additional western railroads prepared to ban perishable freight shipments, beginning Saturday. Notices were posted on the floor of the Chicago Dairy board that the Michigan Central, Michigan Southern and the Baltimore & Ohio, roads would accept butter and eggs shipments consigned to Philadelphia, New York and Boston only until Saturday. Produce men predicted a big rise in butter and eggs prices.

Unfavorable strike news boosted hogs to its former high level of $11.30 a hundred pounds. Cattle prices advanced nearly a dollar. Sheep gained from 15 to 30 cents.

Potatoes prices jumped 15 cents. Live poultry showed gains.

Canadian Pacific was down 3/4; St. Paul 1/4; Southern Pacific 1/4; Baltimore & Ohio 1/4, and losses of 1/4 each were marked against Northern Pacific, Erie, Reading and Southern Railway.

United States Steel opened with a loss of 1/4 at 95 3/4 and the general list was fractionally down.

Reading, Erie, Union Pacific and New York Central showed losses of nearly a point at 10:30.

Although sales of 263,000 shares during the opening hour indicated some unloading, there was little excitement and some recoveries were made later in the hour. Marine common sold to a new high at 42 1/2.

WILSON APPEARS BEFORE CONGRESS TO SECURE LAWS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30. — The president's speech to congress Tuesday, in which he recommended legislation to handle the present railroad situation, follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

I have come to you to seek your assistance in dealing with a very grave situation, which has arisen out of the demand of the employees of the railroads engaged in freight train service that they be granted an eight hour working day, safeguarded by payment for an hour and a half of service for every hour of work beyond the eight.

The matter has been agitated for more than a year. The public has been made familiar with the demands of the men and the arguments urged in favor of them, and even more familiar with the objections of the railroads and their counter demands that certain privileges now enjoyed by their men and certain basis of payment worked out through many years of contest be reconsidered, especially in their relation to the adoption of an eight hour day.

Arbitration Rejected

The matter came some three weeks ago to a final issue and resulted in a complete deadlock between the parties.

The means provided by law for the mediation of the controversy failed and the means of arbitration for which the law provides were rejected. The representatives of the railroads presidents proposed that the demands of the men be submitted in their entirety for arbitration along with certain questions of readjustment as to pay and conditions of employment which seemed to them to be either closely associated with the demands or to call for reconsideration on their own merits, the men absolutely declined arbitration, especially if any of their established privileges were by that means to be drawn again in question. The law in the matter put no compulsion upon them. The 400,000 men from whom the demands proceeded had voted to strike if their demands were refused; the strike was imminent; it has since been set for the fourth of September next. It affects the men who man the freight trains on practically every railway in the country. The freight service throughout the United States must stand still until their places are filled, if, indeed, it should prove possible to fill them at all.

National Calamity

Cities will be cut off from their food supplies, the whole commerce of the nation will be paralyzed, men of every sort and occupation will be thrown out of employment, countless thousands will in all likelihood be brought, it may be, to the very point of starvation, and a tragical national calamity brought on, to be added to the other distresses of the time, because no basis of accommodation or settlement has been found. Just so soon as it became evident that mediation under the existing law had failed and that arbitration had been rendered impossible by the attitude of the men, I considered it my duty to confer with the representatives of both the railroads and the brotherhoods and myself offer mediation, not as an arbitrator, but merely as spokesman of the nation, in the interest of justice, indeed, and as a friend of both parties, but not as judge, only as the representative of 100,000,000 of men, women and children who would pay the price, the incalculable price, of loss and suffering, should these few men insist upon approaching and concluding the matters in controversy between them, merely as employers and employees, rather than as patriotic citizens and after accepting the larger responsibility which the public would put upon them.

Sentiment For It

It seemed to me, in considering the subject matter of the controversy, that the whole spirit of the time and the preponderant evidence of the recent economic experience spoke for the eight hour day. It has been adjudged by the thought and experience of recent years a thing upon which society is justified in insisting as in the interest of health, efficiency, contentment and a general increase of economic vigor. The whole presumption of modern experience would, it seemed to me, be in its favor, whether there was arbitration or not, and the debatable points to settle were those which arose out of the acceptance of the eight hour day rather than those which affected its establishment. I therefore proposed that the eight hour day be adopted by the railway managements and put into practice for the present as a substitute for the existing ten hour basis of pay and service, that I should appoint, with the permission of congress, a small commission to observe the result of the change, carefully studying not only the figures of the altered operating costs, but also the conditions of labor under which the men worked and the operation of their existing agreements with the railroads, with instructions to report the facts as they found them to the congress at the earliest possible day, but without recommendation; and that, after the facts had been thus disclosed, an adjustment should in some orderly manner be sought of all the matters now left unadjusted between the railway managements and the men.

These proposals were exactly in line, it is interesting to note, with the position taken by the supreme court of the United States, when appealed to to protect certain litigants from the financial losses which they confidently expected if they should submit to the regulation of their service by public legislation. The court has held that it would not undertake to form a judgment upon forecasts, but could base its action only upon actual experience, that it must be supplied with facts, not with calculations and opinions, however scientifically attempted. To undertake to arbitrate the question of the adoption of an eight hour day in the light of results, merely estimated and predicted, would be to undertake an enterprise of conjecture. No wise man could undertake it, or, if he did undertake it, it could feel assured of his conclusions.

Offered Services

I unhesitatingly offered the friendly services of the administration to the railway managements to see to it that justice was done the railroads in the outcome. I felt warranted in assuring them that no obstacle of law would be suffered to stand in the way of their increasing their revenues to meet the expenses resulting from the change so far as the development of their business and of their administrative efficiency did not prove adequate to meet them. The public and the representatives of the public, I felt justified in assuring them, were disposed to nothing but justice in such cases and were willing to serve those who served them.

Roads Reject It

The representatives of the brotherhoods accepted the plan; but the representatives of the railroads declined to accept it. In the face of what I cannot but regard as the practical certainty that they will be ultimately obliged to accept the eight hour day by the concerted action of organized labor, backed by the favorable judgment of society, the representatives of the railway management have felt justified in declining a peaceful settlement which would engage all the forces of justice, public and private, on their side, to take care of the event. They feel the hostile influence of shippers, who would be opposed to an increase of freight rates (for which, however, of course, the public itself would pay); they apparently feel no confidence that the interstate commerce commission could withstand the objections that would be made. They do not care to rely upon the friendly assurances of the congress or the president. They have thought it best that they should be forced to yield if they must yield, not by counsel, but by the suffering of the country. While my conferences with them were in progress, and when to all outward appearance those conferences had come to a standstill, the representatives of the brotherhoods suddenly acted and set the strike for September fourth.

Roads for Arbitration

The railway managers based their decision to reject my counsel in this matter upon their conviction that they must at any cost to themselves or to the country stand firm for the principle of arbitration which the men had rejected. I based my counsel upon the indisputable fact that there was no means of obtaining arbitration. The law supplied none; earnest efforts at mediation had failed to influence the men in the least. To stand firm for the principle of arbitration and yet not get arbitration seemed to me futile and something more than futile, because it involved incalculable distress to the country and consequences in some respects worse than those of war and that in the midst of peace. I yielded to no man in firm adherence alike to conviction and of purpose to the people of arbitration in industrial disputes, but matters have come to a sudden crisis in this particular dispute and the country had been caught unprovided with any practicable means of enforcing that conviction in practice (by whose fault we will not now stop to inquire). A situation had to be met whose elements and fixed conditions were indisputable. The practical and patriotic course to pursue, as it seemed to me, was to secure immediate peace by conceding the one thing in the demands of the men which society itself and any arbitrators who represented public sentiment were most likely to approve, and immediately lay the foundations for securing arbitration with regard to everything else involved. The event has confirmed that judgment. I was seeking to compose the present in order to safeguard the future; for I wished an atmosphere of peace and friendly co-operation in which to take counsel with the representatives of the nation with regard to the best means for preventing, so far as it might prove possible to provide against the recurrence of such unhappy situations in the future—the best and most practicable means of securing calm and fair arbitration of all industrial disputes in the days to come. This is assuredly the best way of vindicating a principle, namely, having failed to make certain of its observance in the present, to make certain of its observance in the future.

Congress Last Resort

But I could not propose. I could not govern the will of others who took an entirely different view of the circumstances of the case, who even refused to admit the circumstances to be what they have turned out to be. Having failed to bring the parties to this critical controversy to accommodation, therefore, I turn to you, deeming it clearly my duty as public servants, to leave nothing undone that we can do to safeguard the life and interests of the nation. In the spirit of such a purpose, I earnestly recommend the following legislation:

First—Immediate provision for the enlargement and administrative reorganization of the interstate commerce commission along the lines embodied in the bill recently passed by the house of representatives and now awaiting action by the senate; in order that the commission may be enabled to deal with the many great and various duties now devolving upon it with a promptness and thoroughness which are with its present constitution and means of action practically impossible.

Establish Eight Hour Day

Second—The establishment of an eight hour day as the legal basis of work and wages in the employment of all railway employees who are actually engaged in the work of operating trains in interstate transportation.

Third—The authorization of the appointment by the president of a small body of men to observe the actual results in experience of the adoption of the eight hour day in railway transportation alike for the men and for railroads; its effects in the matter of operating costs, in the application of the existing practices and agreements to the new conditions and in all other practical aspects, with the provision that the investigators shall report their conclusions to the congress at the earliest possible date, but without recommendation as to legislative action; in order that the public may learn from an unprejudiced source just what actual developments have ensued.

Fourth—Explicit approval by the congress of the consideration by the interstate commerce commission of an increase of freight rates to meet such additional expenditures by the railroads as may have been rendered necessary by the adoption of the eight hour day and which have not been offset by administrative readjustments and economies, should the facts disclosed justify the increase.

Fifth—An amendment of the existing federal statute which provides for the mediation, conciliation and arbitration of such controversies as the present by adding to it a provision that in case the methods of accommodation now provided for should fail, a full public investigation of the merits of every such dispute shall be instituted and completed before a strike or lockout may be lawfully attempted.

Power of Draft

And, Sixth—The lodgment in the hands of the executive of the power, in case of military necessity, to take control of such portions and such rolling stocks of the railways of the country as may be required for military use and to operate them for military purposes, with authority to draft into the military service of the United States such train crews and administrative officials as the circumstances require for their safe and efficient use.

This last suggestion I make because we cannot in any circumstances suffer the nation to be hampered in the essential matter of national defense. At the present moment circumstances render this duty particularly obvious. Almost the entire military force of the nation is stationed upon the Mexican border to guard our territory against hostile raids. It must be supplied, and steadily supplied, with whatever it needs for its maintenance and efficiency. If it should be necessary for purposes of national defense to transfer any portion of it upon short notice to some other part of the country, for reasons now unforeseen, ample means of transportation must be available, and available without delay. The power conferred in this matter should be carefully and explicitly limited in case of military necessity, but in all such cases it should be clear and ample.

There is one thing we should do if we are true champions of arbitration. We should make all arbitral awards judgments by record of a court of law in order that their interpretation and enforcement may lie, not with one of the parties to the arbitration, but with an impartial and authoritative tribunal.

These things I urge upon you, not in haste or in merely as a means of meeting a present emergency, but as permanent and necessary additions to the law of the land, suggested, indeed by circumstances we had hoped never to see, but imperative as well as just if such emergencies are to be prevented to your favorable consideration. They demonstrate themselves. The time and the occasion only give emphases to their importance. We need them now and we shall continue to need them.

WARRANTS OUT FOR DELINQUENT OWNERS OF DOGS

HILLSBORO, Wis.—(Special.)—Warrants have been issued against all village dog owners who have failed to pay a license as provided by ordinance. It is said that some of the owners have employed an attorney and intend to stand suit. There has been much discussion the last few weeks as to the legality of the ordinance. The ordinance provides a fine of from five to twenty-five dollars.

Manahan Has Big Crowd

Ex-Congressman James A. Manahan of Minnesota, addressed an audience of about 100 farmers and business men on the street here on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Manahan gave considerable data relative to the operations of the large railroads and the effect upon the people of the country as a result of the railroads being represented in the legislature of the state as well as in congress. Incidentally Mr. Manahan is for Bob La Follette first, last and all the time.

A FORCEFUL PLAY
AT THE MAJESTIC

A photoplay with a punch and a purpose is "Honor Thy Name." We first came to know Frank Keenan and Charles Ray as superior celluloidities in that starkly stirring production, "The Coward," where they were proud father and erring son. They have come back again, true to form, in a forceful, and a more generally appealing photoplay, "Honor Thy Name." In this play Miss Gloom, "Tringle's vampire woman," has one of the best characters ever given her and she puts over some wonderful vampire stuff. Blanche White as the sweetheart at home is an excellent type.

"Honor Thy Name" is a powerful photoplay. There is no stretch about it when the advertising man declares "it grips."

This play with one of the latest Keystones comes to the Majestic on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Others attempting to rush the lifeboats are forced back at the pistol's point by the ship's officers.
